ARCHAEOLOGICAL SURVEY AND INVESTIGATION

The Bolton & Menk cultural resources group has a depth of experience to assist in every phase of archaeological investigation. We help deliver projects, including when a need for archaeological investigation was not foreseen. We work to identify and evaluate or mitigate sites where avoidance is not possible. Our work typically involves off-site research and on-site excavations by professional archaeologists.

Other Environmental Planning Services

- Aquatic Resource Delineations & Permitting
- Natural Resource Surveys
- Community History & Interpretation
- Environmental Documentation
- Aquatic Resource & Prairie Restoration Services
- Local Government Unit Services

Bolton & Menk is your partner on projects. Our cultural resources group works hand-in-hand with design staff to deliver a sophisticated review, allowing our clients to achieve their project goals while also achieving archaeological compliance.

Projects with federal permits, federal or state funding, or within a historic district or public lands may require an archaeological survey. Additionally, projects requiring an Environmental Assessment Worksheet may require an archaeological survey.

Why Bolton & Menk

We understand our clients' goals and work efficiently and effectively to manage potential effects, while still achieving regulatory compliance. Most times, this isn't a service you want to undertake, but it's required by law; we work with you to make this process as painless as possible.
